

Grandad always said, "Wear wool in the woods. Even if you get wet you'll stay warm." Well, grandad was right. He just didn't know how wool accomplishes this amazing feat. It turns out wool is a "living" fiber. When it gets wet it generates its own heat.

© Jeff Foott

We made natural fibers our allies in the battle against the extremes of nature.

WOOL IS THE BENCHMARK FOR ALL OUTDOOR CLOTHING AND SLEEPING INDIAN IS THE BENCHMARK FOR ALL WOOL

Sleeping Indian Designs began with a love of the outdoors and a desire to create clothing superior to everything else on the market. We were frustrated by existing outdoor clothing that fell far short when facing the extremes of nature. There was plenty of gear available, but nothing that met our expectations. We were looking for qualities that are important to anyone serious about experiencing the great outdoors.

We wanted clothing that is comfortable over a wide temperature range and is of functional and practical design. We wanted it to be durable, yet lightweight and not bulky. We wanted clothing that is quiet and provides superior concealment. We wanted it to be wind- and water-resistant, yet breathable. Simple, right?

Well, turning our "simple" list of requirements for functional field wear into actual clothing required an extraordinary amount of work. But we did it. We developed a warm- and cold-weather clothing system that allows you to experience the outdoors from -40°F to +90°F with the least amount of layering and the greatest amount of freedom.

We enlisted nature as an ally in our effort. Rather than look to modern, high-tech materials for our apparel, we chose wool and cotton. There may never be a "perfect" fabric for outdoor clothing, but wool for cold-weather gear and cotton for warm-weather clothing come closer than anything we've found. The fabrics we created take great effort and time to produce. They require a number of costly and intricate processes to manufacture. But we think the results are well worth the effort.

But even the greatest products can't stand alone. At Sleeping Indian our goal is to provide a level of service that is the equal of our outstanding gear. Whether you need advice on the proper clothing for a trip north of the Arctic Circle, or custom sewing for a perfect fit, our expert staff is ready to help.

Whether you head outdoors armed with a camera, a rifle, binoculars or a bow, we are ready to guide you and our gear is ready to protect you. The reward will be to experience the natural beauty of the world with a degree of comfort and freedom never before possible.

Everyone in our company is committed to our mission. We invite you to enjoy the benefits of our warm and cold weather clothing and accessories and to join the many who consider Sleeping Indian Designs their outdoor connection.

Visit our website at:
www.sleep-indian.com